

DEBORAH J. RHODES

Deborah Rhodes is Counselor to the Assistant Attorney General for the Criminal Division of the Department of Justice. She serves as the Department's ex officio Commissioner on the United States Sentencing Commission and as the Department's representative on the Judicial Conference Advisory Committee on Criminal Rules. She also supervises the Office of Policy and Legislation. Previously, she was an Assistant United States Attorney in San Diego where she served as Acting Chief of the Appellate Section and Deputy Chief of the Narcotics Enforcement Section. She successfully prosecuted large drug organizations and returned the first indictments against the Arellano-Felix brothers, leaders of the Tijuana cartel, widely reported as the most violent drug cartel in Mexico. Upon indictment, Ramon Arellano-Felix was named to the FBI's Ten Most Wanted Fugitives. As a Trial Attorney with the Organized Crime and Racketeering Section, Philadelphia Strike Force, Ms. Rhodes tried high profile organized crime cases involving the Scarfo crime family and others in federal courts in Philadelphia, Baltimore and Delaware. PBS featured one of these cases in a documentary entitled, "Mobfathers." Ms. Rhodes clerked for Judge J. William Ditter, Jr. of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania and she was editor-in-chief of the Rutgers Law Journal.
